

Disclaimer

Lewis-Daly & Associates attempts to provide the public with current and accurate information on this website. However, Lewis-Daly & Associates disclaims any implied warranty about the currentness or accuracy of the information, or its appropriateness for a particular purpose. Each individual assumes full responsibility for using the information. Lewis-Daly & Associates is neither responsible nor liable for any claim, loss, or damage resulting from the information on this site. Lewis-Daly & Associates does not endorse or recommend any product or service mentioned in the information, unless explicitly stated otherwise.

In addition, the information provided on this website and through our client's programs is for general information purposes only. The information and presentations are not intended for and should not be considered to provide solutions or recommendations to individual health care problems, lifestyle concerns, or general quality of life issues. Neither the receipt nor the distribution of materials, including the use of private electronic mail in connection with this website, constitutes the formation of a "doctor/counsellor relationship." Materials distributed shall not in any event be deemed confidential or privileged in that regard.

No one shall be entitled to claim detrimental reliance on any views, forms or models provided or expressed, or to claim that there is a duty to update materials provided or to use care to protect the interests of the public. Individuals should not rely on any statements, facts, studies or materials contained within this website (or those of any other website) for health/wellness advice.

Members of the public utilizing information on the Lewis-Daly & Associates website should always confirm such information with appropriate resources. Furthermore the public should contact a physician, or other appropriate health care professional, or lifestyle consultant for their specific health care and wellness needs.

Where links to other websites are provided, Lewis-Daly & Associates does not exert responsibility or control over the contents, products or services of the links or any messages or materials posted by any third party.

The health views, positions, suggestions or opinions expressed are those of each individual author, organization or other entity and that of Lewis-Daly & Associates.